

Bhajji bowled Amrita over

It was clearly Harbhajan Singh's day. He had after all a hot babe for company and the do was all about his game, cricket. Neo Cricket launched six months of cricketing madness starting from the first week of September and going right up to March 2010. The channel aims to break the record TRP rating the IPL had generated. And to do so, it has lined up an interesting array of both, international and domestic cricketing action for its viewers. To start with, there's the Sahara BCCI Corporate Trophy. At the do, Harbhajan won everyone over with his modesty. "I don't really know what to say, I am not very good at talking," he told a much amused audience. Providing the glam quotient was Amrita Rao. On being asked who her favourite cricketer is, she coyly said, "Bhajji." Prasana Krishnan, the COO made it amply clear that the channel's aim was to bring quality cricket to India and take Indian cricket to the world. The event ended on an emotional note. Recalling how his late father wanted him to play cricket, Bhajji said that though after his death the ace bowler had given up playing about four months, he picked up the ball again, only to fulfil his father's dreams.

What a reply!

How many matches should a cricketer play in a year? Here's the answer, trademark Bhajji style: "I am young now, I can play any number of matches. But when I cross 35, I am sure five matches will be more than enough!"
